

EVOLUTION ???

Moody's

The result

Fitch

Standard-Poors

Architecture - Society

Climate

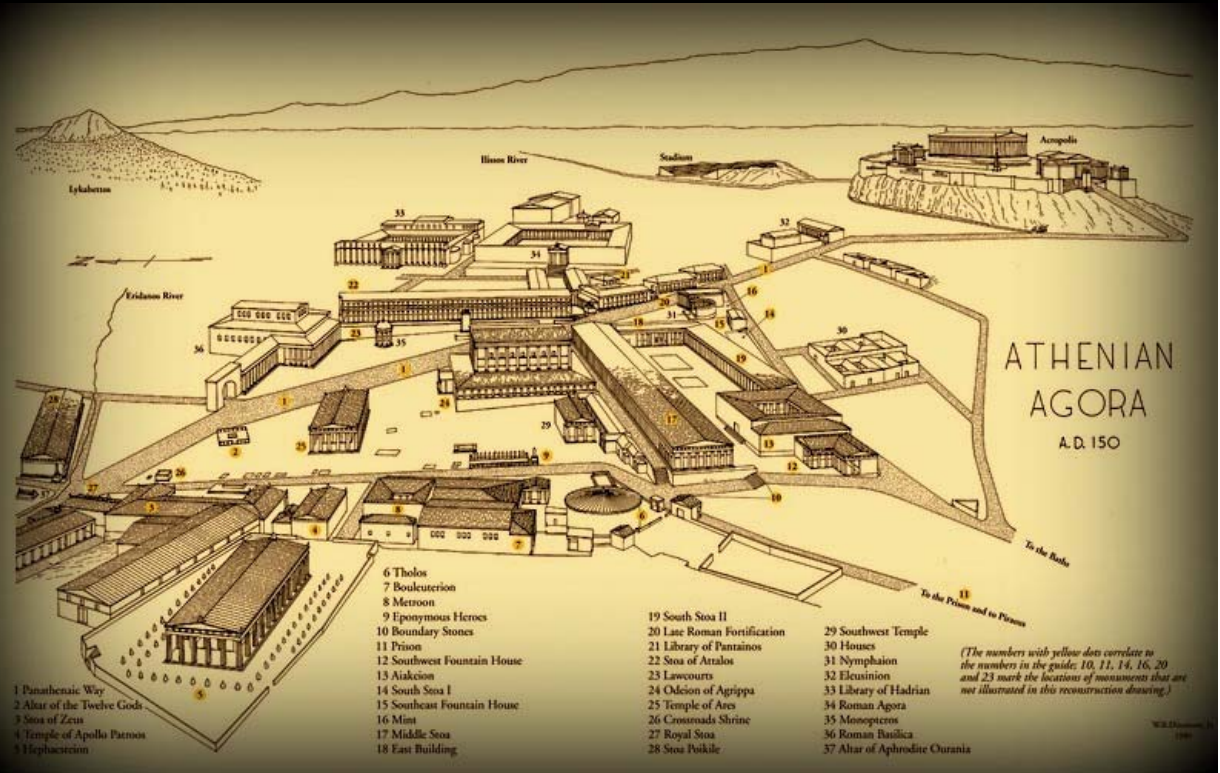

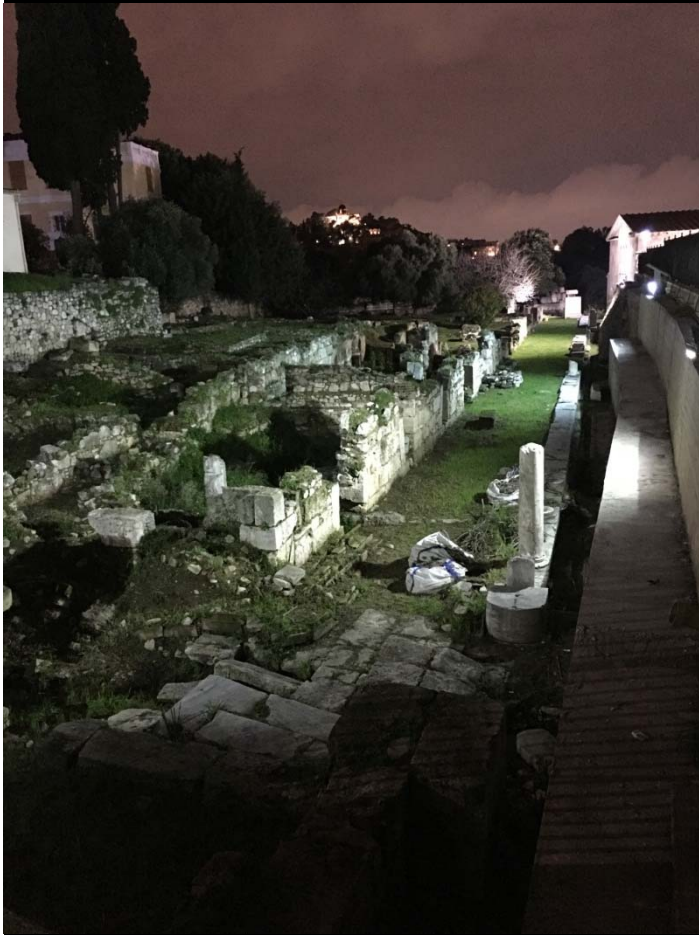

Environment

Culture

in time in space in mobility
in technology

Unification of Athens Archaeological Sites S.A.:

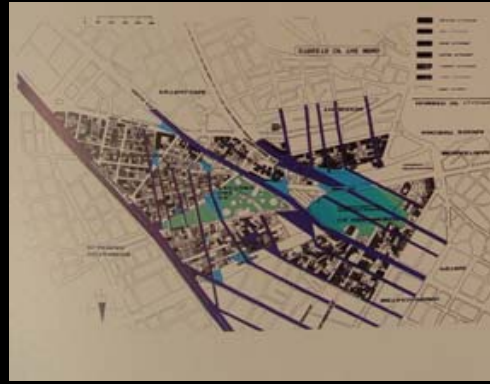

Joint Programme of the Ministry for the Environment,
Planning and Public Works and the Ministry of Culture

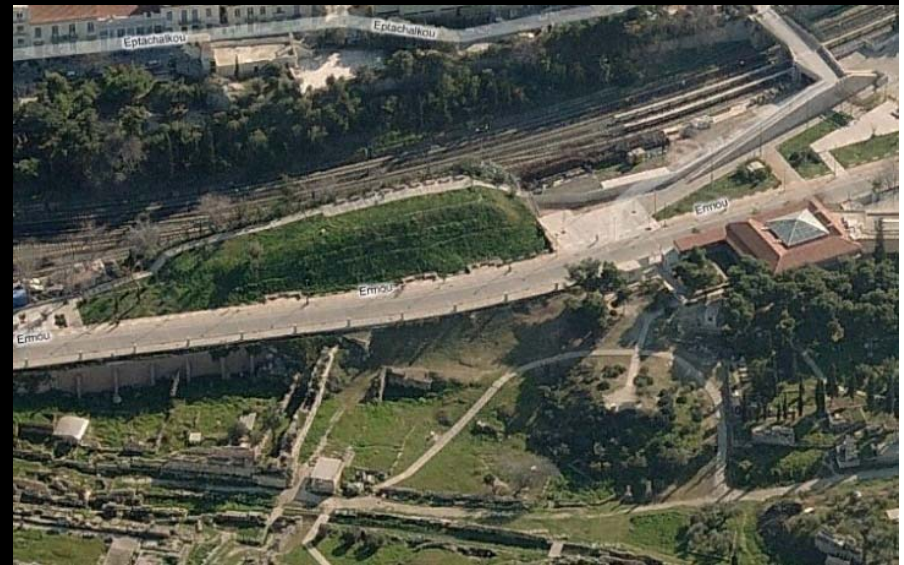

A large “open” museum has been created, unifying the rich cultural heritage with the city’s every day life.

Solar and Wind Streets

Athens Olympics 2004-Green unification of Archaeological sites

Kerameikos Urban renovation

FIRST TIME SO UNITED.

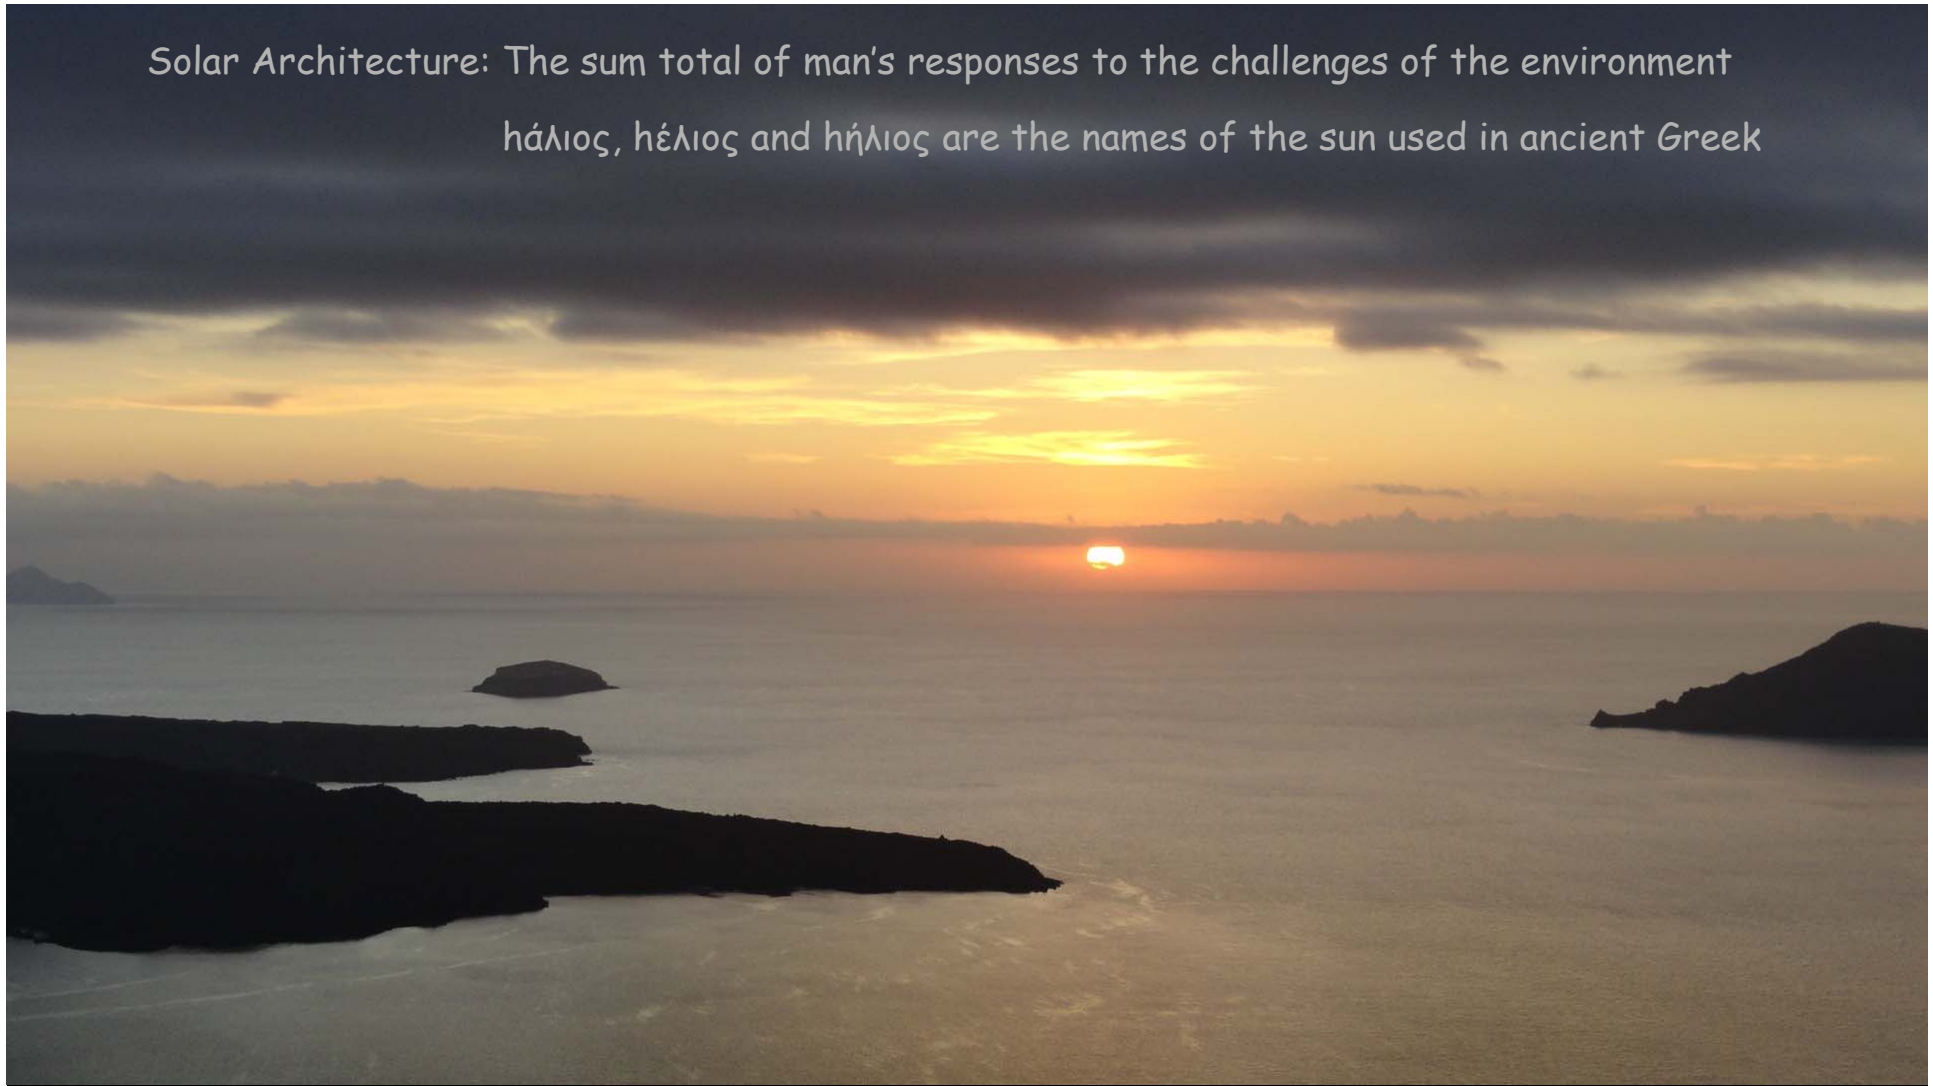

CPD UIA-NKUA Programme: Design and Optimization of Zero Energy Consumption Buildings

A new distinct initiative by the International Union of Architects (UIA), conducted in cooperation with the National and Kapodistrian University of Athens – E-Learning Programme

Solar Architecture: The sum total of man's responses to the challenges of the environment

ἥλιος, ἥλιος and ἡήλιος are the names of the sun used in ancient Greek

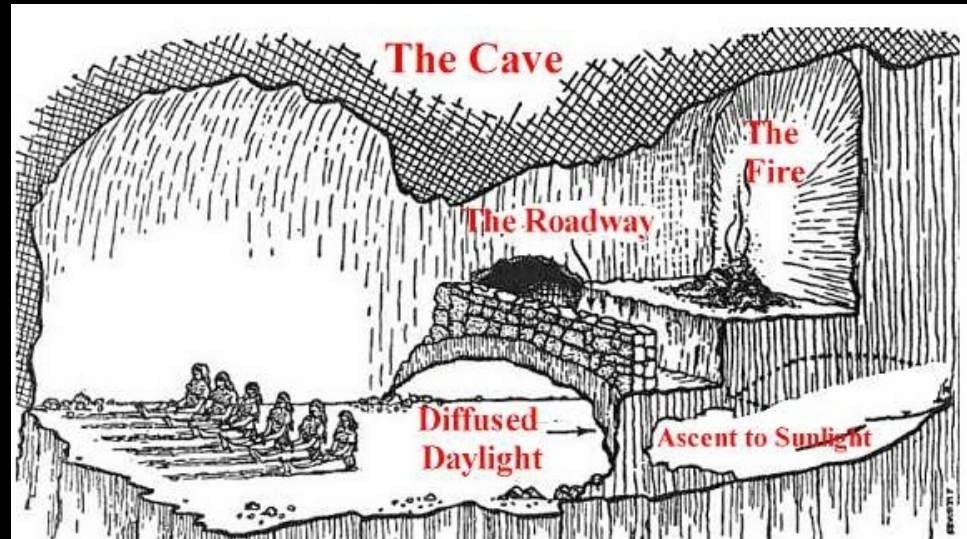

CLIMATE CHANGE

Nikos Fintikakis Architect
UIA VICE PRESIDENT

1510 a.c Hieronymus Bosch
The Garden of Earthly Delights

400 b.c

POLIS-POLITEIA-PLATO-CITY STATE-REPUBLIC
VITAE-VIOS-BIO-CLIMATIC ENVIRONMENT

Plato's "Allegory of the Cave" from The Republic

Unlike the Apology, which was probably written shortly after Socrates' death, The Republic is a much later work, and the "Socrates" here may or may not accurately represent the historical Socrates; he is certainly the mouthpiece of Plato's own thought. The Republic is a lengthy discussion of the nature of justice (clearly a sore point for Plato, who was present at Socrates' trial); the "Allegory of the Cave" is a discussion of the nature of the kind of knowledge that will bring about a just society.

Do you recognize the kind of thinking Plato is describing? Do you recognize the "cave"? Do you live there? Do your friends? How do you recognize what is real? How can you tell the real from the false? How can you tell? What are you doing at university? How do you connect your education with your future? Does that education imply obligations to others? What might they be? What should you do? Why? How?